The Washington Chronicle gives an item of interest concerning the would be assassin of Mr. Seward :

The Rev. A. D. Gillette had a great deal CHILLICOTHE, O., July 10, 1865.

I did myself the pleasure yesterday afternoon of driving out to "Fruit Hill" and spending a few hours with Hon. William Allen. His home-place, while it is unpressed in the Confederate service, and several sisters. Allen. His home-place, while it is unpre-tentious, is one of the most delightful places in this section of country, where-to friends are ever welcomed by a warmand hospitality, reminding one of the ladity that is represented to have been rived characteristic of the society in eccding generation. There is, perhaps in in the State who is more decidedly lent than he. To the study of science, n in the State who is more decided, the state of science, but than he. To the study of science, by, general literature, and the politics of guerillas, and here he says he found a most desperate set of fellows. He says he country, no one brings more zest; country, no one brings and this study serves to fortify and strengthen his faith in the cause of Democracy. In study, and in the companionship of his charming daughter the most of his time is charming daughter the most of his time is taken up. Time deals gently with him.—

The deals gently with him.—

The collisits as much physical and mental in the rebel service from a sense of duty and a conscientious belief that he was performing an obligation he owed to his the Confederate government. It should be here stated that he says, he entered the papers of the State on the question of the state are taking a high and present the state are taking as the state vigor as he did years ago.

He was induced to join the cavalry forces press of the State are taking a high and under Mosby on account of his inability to manful position on the subject: Unlike many men who have nere prominent positions at the hands of the Demonstrate party, he was faithful to the party in its darkest and most trying hours—faithful and fell to the ground. To his connection when he knew that overwhelming defeat the connection with Mosby's band he attributes his introduction to Booth and the evils consequent that subject has hitherto been declared.—

The question must be met, and it is idle embraces for a higher sum, all for the poor to talk of giving suffrage to the negro in soldier. Men and women cried about the random way in which sentiment upon that subject has hitherto been declared.—

"give, or be dammed!" "Contribute, or be mabbed!" And when he knew that overwhelming defeat and gloom were sure to overtake it, through false charges and a clamor set up against it by a conscienceless fanaticism. As to the arise and purposes of the party dominant, throughout the last four terrible years, he had a very keen and just perception. No doubt whatever he has entertained of the partiotism of the mass of that purty; but he has all glong been firm in the conviction of the had all ways been led to believe that, from the very commencement of our uninappy troubles, the abolitionists, who have given to it its doctrine and its law—have not desired a restoration.

It seems but yesterday that loyal ladies and gentlemen, if we may use the express-ion, were sending mittens, flannel shirts, religious tracts, abolition newspapers and election tickets to the "poor soldiers." The mittens and flannel shirts were all right.— The Rev. A. D. Gillette had a great deal of conversation with Payne. He revealed to him the fact that he was a son of Rev. George C. Powell, a Baptist clergyman, residing at Live Oak Station, in Tallahassee county, Florida. He had two brothers, both of whom, he believed, were killed in the Confederate service, and several sisters. He says he enlisted in the rebel service when he was sixteen years of age, and is now about twenty years old.
